Wellness champion, Sandra Strauss and Dan Watts, MD, are launching their new book detailing their families' journeys of hard-to-diagnose illnesses, now identified as chronic inflammatory response syndrome (CIRS), a silent epidemic. They'll offer important insights how exposures to mold, Lyme, heavy metals, and other toxins, can lead to many chronic conditions, especially 25% of population who are genetically vulnerable as poor detoxifiers.

"I hope that this book finds its way into the hands of the growing number of people suffering with chronic complex illnesses. So many people are rejected and marginalized by our medical system in their search for health. This story gives voice to the journey of healing through functional medicine —an approach that validates the patient's experience of illness as real and legitimate. Many thanks for this empowering story!"
